may be, hath endured a griefe might equall yours, if both were iuſtly weighed, though wayward fortune did maligne my ſtate, my deriuation was from anceſtors who ſtood equiuolent with mighty Kings, but time hath rooted out my parentage, and to the world and aukward caſualties, bound me in ſeruitude, I wil deſiſt, but there is ſomething glowes vpon my cheek, and whiſpers in mine eare, Goe not till he ſpeake,

Per. My fortunes, parentage, good parentage to equall mine; was it not thus, what ſay you?

Mar. I ſaide, my Lord, if you did know my parentage, you would not do me violence.

Per. I do thinke ſo, pray you turne your eyes vpon me, y'are like ſome-thing that, what Country-women heare of theſe ſhewes?

Mar. No, nor of any ſhewes, yet I was mortally brought foorth, and am no other then I appeare.

Per. I am great with woe, and ſhall deliuer weeping: my deareſt wife was like this maide, and ſuch a one my daughter might haue beene: my Queenes ſquare browes, her ſtature to an inch, as wand-like ſtraite, as ſiluer voyc'ſt, her eyes as iewell-like, and caſt as richly, in pace another Iuno. Who ſtarues the eares ſhe feedes, & makes them hungry, the more ſhe giues them ſpeech; where do you liue?

Mar. Where I am but a ſtranger from the decke, you may diſcerne the place.

Per. Where were you bred? and how atchiu'd you theſe endowments which you make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I ſhould tell my hiſtory, it would ſeeme like lies diſdaind in the reporting.

Per. Prethree ſpeake, falſeneſſe cannot come from thee, for thou lookeſt modeſt as iuſtice, and thou ſeemſt a Pallas for the crownd truth to dwell in, I will beleeue thee, and make my ſences credite thy relation, to points that ſeem impoſſible, for thou lookſt like one I loued indeed; what were thy friends? Didſt thou not ſtay when I did puſh thee backe, which was when I perceiud thee that thou cam'ſt from good diſcent.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per.

Per. Report thy parentage, I thinke thou ſaidſt thou hadſt beene toſt from wrong to iniury, and that thou thoughts thy griefes might equall mine, if both were opened.

Mar. Some ſuch thing I ſaid, and ſaid no more, but what my thoughts did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy ſtory, if thine conſidered prooue the thouſand part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I haue ſuffered like a gyrle, yet thou doſt look like patience, gazing on Kings graues, and ſmiling extremity out of acte, what were thy friends? how loſt thou thy name, my moſt kinde virgin? recount I do beſeech thee, Come ſit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. Oh I am mockt, and thou by ſome inſenced God ſent hither to make the world to laugh me.

Mar. Patience good ſir, or heere ile ceaſe.

Per. Nay ile bee patient, thou little knowſt how thou doeſt ſtartle me to call thy ſelfe Marina.

Mar. The name was giuen me by one that had ſome power, my father and a King.

Per. How, a Kings daughter, and cald Marina?

Mar. You ſaid you would beleeue me, but not to be a trouble of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you fleſh and bloud?
Haue you a working pulſe, and are no Fairy?
Motion well ſpeake on, where were you borne?
And wherefore cald Marina?

Mar. Cald Marina, for I was borne at ſea.

Per. At ſea! who was thy mother?

Mar. My mother was the Daughter of a King, who dyed the minute I was borne, as my good Nurſe Lychorida hath oft deliuered weeping.

Per. O ſtop there a little, this is the rareſt dreame
That ere dull ſleepe did mocke ſad fooles withall,
This cannot be my daughter, buried, wel, where were you bred?
Ile heare you more to the bottome of your ſtory, and neuer interrupt you.

Mar. You ſcorne, beleeue me twere beſt I did giue ore.
